

Press Release

Join the Meeteetse Museums for a presentation by Dr. Larry Todd on ice patch archaeology and elk migration corridors in Park County on September 7th at 1 pm. Admission is free.

Park County is home to breathtaking landscapes and rich histories. Among these landscapes are ice patches, areas where the snow pack has turned into perennial ice. These ice patches have trapped information about Wyoming prehistoric peoples and environment. Organic materials are preserved in the anaerobic environment created by the ice patches. As organic materials are not typically preserved in archaeological settings, ice patches present a rare opportunity to learn about prehistoric peoples and their environment.

Building on previous research, Dr. Larry Todd will present on prehistoric archaeological materials and contemporary elk migration corridors, as researched through the Wyoming Migration Initiative.

For more information contact info@meeteetsemuseums.org or call (307)868-2423. The Meeteetse Museums are located at 1947 State Street in Meeteetse.